Account Aggregator Framework and Consent Architecture

In exercise of the powers conferred under the applicable statute, the following directions are issued. These directions shall come into force with immediate effect and shall supersede earlier instructions on the subject to the extent that they are inconsistent.

1. Role of the aggregator

An account aggregator shall act solely as a conduit for the transfer of financial information with the consent of the customer. It shall not store, process, analyse or use the financial information that passes through it.

2. Consent artefact

Every transfer of financial information shall be preceded by a consent artefact recording the identity of the requesting entity, the purpose of the request, the types of information sought, the period for which the consent is valid, and the frequency of access.

3. Revocation

A customer may revoke a consent at any time. Upon revocation the account aggregator shall communicate the revocation to the financial information provider and to the financial information user within one hour.

4. Data storage prohibition

The account aggregator shall not store the financial information for any period longer than is necessary for the transfer, and in no case beyond the completion of the session.

5. Financial information provider

A financial information provider shall transmit the requested information within one hour of receiving a valid request accompanied by a consent artefact, and shall not levy any charge on the customer for the transmission.

6. Audit trail

An immutable audit trail of every consent granted, used and revoked shall be maintained for a period of not less than seven years.

7. Grievance

Every account aggregator shall designate a grievance officer whose particulars shall be displayed on its application and website, and shall resolve complaints within thirty days.
